

Telemarketing should be outlawed completely. With all due respect to telemarketers and businesses, one should be contacted by phone for telemarketing only if he specifically asked to be. Anything else is a severe violation of one's privacy, not to mention that it is very annoying. If you want to advertise your business use the media or even junk mail - anything is better than telemarketing. People who use telemarketing to promote their business should be fined and if this doesn't work even put behind bars. So the "do not call" act is the least we can have to protect our privacy, which is obviously much more important than someone's desire to make more money.
